Threads Neglected In The Account From Thursday's Happenings.

JANESVILLE SHOULD BE PROUD

Some Of The Views Of The Great Parade, That Demonstrate That The Bower City Knows How To Entertain Royally.

That Janesville knows how to entertain an immense concourse of people and give them just what they promised, including the weather, was demonstrated on Thursday. Few place the figures below twenty thousand and the majority above thirty. That the Janesville business men have no reason to complain of lack of patronage is illustrated by the receipts at the local banks received yesterday and today. The crowds that assembled on July 4th, enjoyed themselves and spent money for the pleasure. The Shurtliff Ice Cream company alone made over three thousand gallons of ice cream for Janesville and adjacent country and the bakeries report an immense sale of their products. The restaurant keepers were worn out when the last of the crowd left the city and receipts for the hotels and the meantime the other matter will be taken up. The photographers for the Gazette were very fortunate in securing several excellent pictures of the different exhibits in the parade and the Gazette also offers a cartoon, of the entire days feature drawn by Mr. Driscoll, formerly cartoonist for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. These cuts will be found scattered through the paper today and will doubtless be enjoyed by many readers of the paper. After considerable deliberation the committee of judges on the Nonesuch Circus parade last evening made the first award to the United States military display of cavalry, artillery, mule train, and hospital corps, put on by the Spanish-American War Veterans under the direction of Hans Jacke, John L. Snyder, Edward S. Falter, Mrs. Bert Hill, and others. The near-places open for the thirsty public give out statements of receipts into the hundreds of dollars. Many merchants sold large bills of goods to people from away who took this opportunity of coming to Janesville to do their trading. Through the thoughtfulness of Alderman Sheldon, drinking cups in sufficient number were placed on the fountains and especial attention should be called to the act of Fred E. Green who had a large barrel with running water from four spigots with plenty of cups in front of his store on south Main street where the thirsty might drink. It was a thoughtful act and appreciated by thousands who availed themselves of the opportunity of a cool refreshing drink. The arrangement committee might remember this feature for future celebrations and see that more of similar barrels are in use. The need of a rest room for women and children was demonstrated more than ever on Thursday. Thousands of persons were inconvenienced through a lack of these facilities and their day would have been much more enjoyable had they been arranged for. There is talk among many of the business men of starting such a move as was attempted by Rev. R. C. Denison some time ago and establish a permanent room where women and children, strangers in the city, can go for an hour's rest or a cooling, refreshing wash with use of comb and brush. The street were gay with the electric lights and bunting. There is also

SENATOR PETTUS 86 YEARS OLD TODAY

Recent Death of Colleague and Friend, Senator Morgan, Takes Enjoyment From Occasion.

Selma, Ala., July 6.—Senator Edmund W. Pettus, the oldest member of the United States senate, was 86 years old today. Senator Pettus still feels deeply the loss of his venerable friend, colleague and fellow-townsman, Senator John T. Morgan, who recently passed away. The two had been life-

He disclaims any natural power, but makes a "plaster" which is applied to diseased portions of human bodies. Visitors say he is a man of great learning, and modest, but effective.

PRINCESS VICTORIA REACHES 40TH YEAR

Only Unmarried Daughter of English Rulers is Reported to Now be Enjoying Fair Health.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] London, July 6.—Princess Victoria, the only unmarried daughter of King Edward and Queen Alexandra, celebrated her 40th birthday today. The Princess is one of the best-loved members of the royal family and the news that her health is better now than for a long time past has been received with genuine pleasure among all classes. Her health has always been delicate, and she neither rides nor shoots, but nevertheless she is very fond of athletics. Reading, both prose and poetry, occupies much of her spare time, and Browning is said to be her favorite poet.

TO REVIVE LIFE OF THE MIDDLE AGES

All Eisenach, Germany, Will be Clothed in Attire of Sixteenth Century.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Berlin, July 6.—At Eisenach there was opened today a notable festival in celebration of the seven hundredth anniversary of the Sangerkrieg on the historical Wartburg and of the birth of St. Elisabeth of Eisenach, a celebration for which the Central States of Germany have been preparing for a year past. The festival is to last three days, during which time the life of the Middle Ages is to be followed out in closest detail. The inhabitants of the castle will not only be clothed in thirteenth century costumes, but thousands of the inhabitants of Eisenach have agreed to follow the example. The days are to be devoted to contests of song, while the evenings will be given over to popular games and the roasting of oxen. One of the most interesting events will be the procession next Monday, when the townspeople in costume will march up to the castle, where they will be received by the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar and his court.

ROCKEFELLER ENTERS CHICAGO COURT ROOM

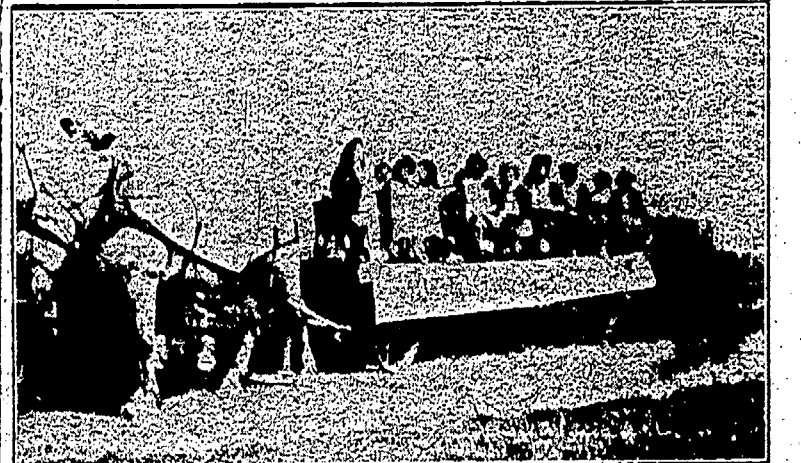

Millionaire Walks Into the Court at Ten O'Clock This Morning in Answer to Subpoena.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, July 7.—John D. Rockefeller entered the court room at ten o'clock this morning. With attorneys and eleven other officers of the Standard Oil company, including Wm. Rockefeller, John D. Rockefeller, the so-called richest man in the world, faced the federal court room today. He submitted to an examination conducted in person by Judge Landis. There was a terrific jam at the door when the court opened requiring the efforts of a large force of police to maintain order. Rockefeller was called to the stand at ten-fifty. In reply to questions by Judge Landis the oil magnate said he was president of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, the position being purely an honorary one, for the past eight or ten years; that he has not taken an active part in its affairs during that time. The outstanding capital of the company he believed to be about a hundred million dollars and the business of the Standard, generally speaking, was the production of oil. Attorney Miller made frequent objections to the line of questioning but the judge over-ruled them in every instance. Very little information was derived from Rockefeller. (Continued on Page 2.)

PORTUGAL'S RULERS MAY NOT WEATHER THIS STORM

Demand For Republic Monarch And Consort To Leave Thrones.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] London, July 6.—The news from Lisbon this week has been of the gravest character. The situation has become so acute, indeed, that London would not be surprised to learn at any moment that King Carlos has been forced to leave Portugal, and that a republic had been proclaimed at Lisbon. Still, the fat and jolly King Carlos has weathered many a storm during the past few years and he may be able to pull through the present crisis. But when the principal newspapers of a monarchical country begin to hold up their sovereign to public obloquy as a "manifest coward," as a "ridiculous and useless dude," and as an "incapable fool," and loudly demand that he take his departure and make way for the establishment of a republic, the "only form of government consistent with human dignity, common sense and modern progress," then a revolution may be regarded as imminent and the overthrow of the throne is at hand. Peasantry Are Discontented. For a long time past there has been growing discontent among the peasantry, due to the excessive and ever-increasing taxation to which they are subjected. It is safe to say that they will cheerfully welcome and submit to any change of rulership, no matter what it is that will tend to alleviate the crushing burden of imposts with which they are at present literally overwhelmed. As for the ruling, and probably would be happy if he were well rid of his job, provided he received a good sized pension for himself and family. It has always been said that the political ideas of King Carlos are liberal and progressive, but unfortunately he lacks the energy and courage of his convictions. His chief desire is to worry himself as little as possible about the condition of public affairs. He is extremely fond of sport and pleasure. He is a first-rate shot, can use his fists in the most approved style, is an adept both with the pencil and the brush and is a splendid swimmer and diver. His appetite is proportionate to his size, and he is the biggest and fattest of all the monarchs of Europe. Queen an Able Woman. Carlos is said to be faithful to his wife. Gossips have it that he is in too great fear of her not to be, if he were inclined otherwise. Queen Amelie is homely, being large-boned and tall, with prominent features, but she has a good deal of political sagacity, more than any other, perhaps, of the Orleans family. Some of the Orleansists say that if she had been born a man she would be King of France. But she has a hard enough time of it to keep her own throne. She is fond of every kind of sport, is strong-minded, and smokes strong cigars. Yet she is domestic, as she shows by occasionally making her own dresses, and she learned medicine in order to properly care for one of her own children.

ban population, it is republican to the very core. The chambers of commerce and the chambers of manufacture, the associations of wine growers and wine dealers, the industrial guilds, the banking classes, the legal and medical professions, the faculties and students of the various universities and colleges, may even the very officers and soldiers of the army, particularly the scientific branches of the latter, are nearly all openly professed foes of the monarchy, and acknowledge republicanism, who are firmly convinced that Portugal will never recover her former prosperity, as well as her prestige among the nations of the universe, unless she adopts a form of government that exercises a less fighting influence upon the life of the people than the deplorable rule of the house of Braganza. As for the urban labor element it is almost wholly socialist. Carlos Not to Blame. Really, Carlos is not responsible for this state of affairs. He is a fat and lazy fellow, good-natured and easy-going, who was suffering from an incurable illness. Her strong common sense has saved Portugal from many a financial and political crisis, and she may be said to be the real master of Portugal today. Fatality Pursues Braganzas. Such is the pair that rules Portugal. But over them seems to hang the fatality that has pursued the house for the last two generations. Queen Stephanie's death in 1890, three months after her marriage, was supposed to have been due to foul play. Don Jon died by poison, as did Prince Ferdinand. Dom Augustus and King Luis were also poisoned, but escaped death, although the latter never recovered from its effects and remained an invalid to the day of his death. The traditions of the house of Portugal from first to last have not been such as to make the people anxious for a continuance of their rule. That a republic will be proclaimed at no distant date is the prevailing belief among Englishmen well acquainted with the situation in Portugal.

To Stop Piles Try This.

Piles get instant relief when Dr. Shoop's Magic Ointment is applied. It's a Pile Cure, remember, and it is good for nothing else whatever except piles.

General Ointments, for many uses, can't possibly cure piles. A pile ointment must be specific. Every aim of its maker must be directed specifically toward piles alone. Says Dr. Shoop, "I make three valuable ointments, and yet, one only—Dr. Shoop's Magic Ointment—will bring help to pile sufferers." Even then, in old chronic cases originating because of a torpid liver, with biliousness, I prescribe my Dr. Shoop's Restorative internally while using Magic Ointment locally or externally. Keep in mind this fact, please, that the large blood vessels of the liver originate in the walls of the rectum, where piles arise. Obstruct these vessels in the liver and piles instantly appear. Dr. Shoop's Restorative corrects stomach and liver sluggishness, hence its value as an aid to Magic Ointment in the treatment of obstinate cases of piles. None genuine without Dr. Shoop's name on the package. Sold at 50 cents by Streets Tastefully Decorated—Many Attractions, Including Ball Games and Speaking.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Clinton, Wis., July 5.—Clinton is entertaining many of its former residents at a genuine Home Coming. The only people who apparently are not enjoying the gathering are the street show men who claim the old-timers and visitors take too much time to visit and do not patronize their shows. The sidewalks are tastefully decorated with streamers, boughs and gay with bunting. Band-stands, lunch counters and the usual attractions for a street carnival are found everywhere. Everyone in Clinton is enjoying themselves and order is being kept by the firemen. Despite the fact three saloons are running there is very little drunkenness and but little disorder. The crowd is a visiting one and to accommodate them the committee have placed chairs and benches along the street so that all can rest and talk. Frequent barrels filled with ice water and plenty of cups give the thirsty an opportunity to refresh themselves. Two ball games—with Delavan the Fourth and with Janesville the fifth—resulted in two victories for the home team. On the fourth the Delavan band furnished the music and Friday the Janesville band delighted the audiences. BIGGEST GROWTH EVER RECORDED

LIBRARIAN'S ANNUAL REPORT TO BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

CIRCULATION GAIN 12,013

$178.57 Collected in Fines—Rental Collection of Books Has Paid for Itself Twice.

The annual meeting of the board of directors of the Janesville free public library was held last evening. The librarian's report for the past year was received and accepted. Much of interest is found in this report, which follows:

To the Board of Directors of the Janesville Public Library: Gentlemen: On account of the absence of records in certain departments, during the past year a count was taken of the number of volumes in the library, revealing a total of 19,389, instead of 17,850 as reported last year.

This total includes all duplicate books and magazines and all documents. During the past year we have added 1187 volumes, 555 in main library, 551 in children's room and 551 documents. Six books were destroyed on account of contamination disease. Nine were lost in circulation and of these four were paid for. Fourteen books, missing at inventory last year, have not been accounted for, and 220 books have been withdrawn from circulation as worn out, and destroyed.

Of the total number withdrawn 151 were from the main library and 98 from children's room. An inventory taken in June found 13 books missing, one in children's room and 12 in main library.

We have now in the library 20,285 volumes, of which 12,013 are in the main library and may be called our adult working library, 3,225 in children's room and 3189 in document room.

There are now 5999 registered borrowers. The registration of borrowers, begun when the new building was opened, has now been in force for four years. It is customary at the end of five years to begin to re-register, in order to keep a live registration. Upon the circulating department, the popularity of the library largely depends.

This year we are able to report a gain of 12,013 over last year, a circulation of 60,273 volumes which is the greatest the library has ever had. Our traveling library of German books continues to be patronized; 210 books were drawn from it last year. From money paid in on rental copies we have purchased 127 books, at a cost of $152.55. There are now 70 books in the collection, the other 67 having been placed upon the regular shelves. We have now on hand from the rental collection $22.30.

The past school year has seen the establishing of school room libraries in every school in the city except one—the Jefferson—in which no regular school collections were sent on account of its nearness to the library building.

A school room library is made up of thirty or sometimes more books, which are sent to each grade to be kept a term. The teacher acts as librarian and loans the books to pupils, keeping a record of the circulation of each book. 1329 books were sent out in school room libraries and 563 were issued to teachers on special privilege cards for use in the schools.

Forty-seven teachers made use of such cards, and a total circulation of 7194 was reported from the schools, 6294 from children's books and 800 from books drawn from main library.

Work with the schools is carried on mainly through the children's room, and the success of this work—due to the interest of our school superintendent, the hearty cooperation of the teachers of the city and the good work of our children's librarian—is, of the year's progress, the most gratifying that we have to report.

A rather unique departure has been the loaning of birds from the collection housed in the children's room to different schools for purposes of study.

In the reading room we have on file fifty-four magazines and eight newspapers.

During the busiest winter months an attendant had charge of reading and reference rooms in the evening. This relieved the desk attendant and proved a most satisfactory arrangement.

Five hundred and seventy books were rebound during the year, of which 91 were periodicals.

Fines have been deposited to the amount of $73.00; $58.05 has been paid out of incidental expenses, and we have on hand $17.49, making a total of $178.57 taken in from fines.

Respectfully submitted, GERTRUDE J. SKAWLEM, Librarian.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

An old gentleman, who was an old-time whist player, was invited to try his hand at "bridge." He found but little trouble in adapting himself to the game, and with a good partner succeeded in winning.

Someone asked him what he thought of "bridge," and he said, "Well, if I wanted to gamble for pleasure I would choose poker, or some other game that is all luck or bluff. There seems to be just luck enough about this game to make it fascinating for women and amateur gamblers."

The old gentleman sized the game up right for there is no science in holding honors and but little science in playing a three-handed game of whist.

Bridge is an old English game, and maintains prestige because of the elements of chance. It is, moreover, gentler than poker, but just as uncertain as a money investment. It is a society fad, just now, in this country, and is the great prize game at dejeuner and social functions. Dependent of the chance connected with it, and it would be forgotten in a twelve-month.

The popularity of bridge, because of its gambling features, suggests the thought that added to the humdrum of life, it possesses the strain of race, in one form or another, is another strain equally pronounced, and that is the universal mania for gambling.

Good people would be generally shocked if invited to visit Monte Carlo where fortunes are lost and won legitimately, with daily regularity, but many of these same good people are possessed with a mad desire to get something for nothing, and every opportunity is improved to consummate this ambition.

The argument is used that life at its best is a lottery, offering every incentive to gambling. The farmer prepares his soil, sows his seed, and takes long chances on the outcome. If conditions are favorable he seems a harvest, but there are many chances.

The merchant invests time and money in business and hopes for success, yet knowing that more merchants lose than win.

The manufacturer develops his industry from a small beginning. The combine has swallowed up his neighbor, but he hopes to avoid catastrophe, and takes chances.

The boy goes out from the old home, where his life has been sheltered, to take chances with an army of boys in the great conflict, and the mother watches him with hope and fear, for she knows something of the struggle in the great lottery of life.

It is not surprising in this atmosphere of chance and change, that the disposition to take unusual chances develops and so, all over the country, gambling in one form or another, comes to the surface.

The great majority of mining ventures are gambling schemes, pure and simple. They are exploited in the interests of shrewd promoters, and as a rule they are the only gainers in the enterprise.

A Milwaukee man spent a year in Old Mexico for his health, not long ago. He wanted to make expenses and so secured 10,000 acres of land at 25 cents per acre, and organized a plantation company, capitalized for $1,000,000.

He offered a Janesville friend a chance to go in with him as one of four. They were to invest $5,000 each, plant a few trees, sell the stock at $100 per share, with an acre of land thrown in, pay dividends and cultivate the land for seven years, then turn it over to the stockholders.

This is the sort of a rat-hole that has captured a lot of money, during the past few years, invested because of the gambling fever so prevalent.

Similar conditions, in less virulent form, exist out in the zinc mining country. The people who have lived in that section all their lives, are not investors. They are satisfied to sell or lease their land, and they are about the only men who are not taking long chances.

A magazine writer, now in Goldfield, says that there are plenty of men with plenty of money on the ground, to handle every good mine yet discovered. Yet people are flocking there by the thousands to gamble on worthless chances.

When the government opens up a little reservation of land, and disposes of it by lottery, more money is spent in a grand scramble to be first on the ground, than the land is worth.

The old Louisiana lottery was considered a menace to the people, but it was one of the best safety valves that the nation ever had. Money might better be invested in a lottery ticket, than in many enterprises which are called legitimate, and yet which are gambling pure and simple.

The old doctrine of hell-fire and damnation, which was formerly taught so vigorously, was inspired by the belief that men and women were taking long chances on the life to come.

These heroic efforts have largely given way to the doctrine that what humanity needs, more than future protection, is preparation for the life of here and now, and so the church to-day attempts to build character, rather than safety barracks.

People who have attended the Society meetings, have not heard very much about the hereafter. He believes that right living and peace with in, means safety here, and no cause for anxiety about the hereafter. It is a sane and reasonable belief, and it is not surprising that men and women are ready to accept it.

No man can afford to take chances on the present life. The occasional glass may mean the confirmed drunkard. The first dollar borrowed from the till, may mean default. The first deception may develop a life of deceit. The first card played for money, may mean the full-fledged gambler, and there is no sin on the long list so demoralizing and destructive. It pays to be clean, in heart and life, and the rewards are sure and certain.

AMERICAN PLAN IS ARGUED AT HAGUE

PROTECTION OF PRIVATE PROPERTY AT SEA THE TOPIC.

STATEMENT FOR BRAZIL

Why She Supports the Proposal—Great Britain Wants Abolition of Contraband—Views of Other Nations.

The Hague, July 6.—The entire afternoon sitting of the committee on the Geneva convention was given over to a discussion of the American proposition, presented by Joseph H. Choate on June 24, regarding the inviolability of private property on the high seas. The committee sat under the presidency of Prof. De Martens.

M. Nelidoff (Russia), president of the conference, was present. Joseph H. Choate, Gen. Horace Porter, U. S. Rose and William I. Buchanan, of the American delegation, and David J. Hill, American minister to The Netherlands, were in attendance.

Many delegates surrounded the table reserved for the American representatives, who were busy in answering confidential inquiries regarding the scope and extent of the American doctrine.

Text of the Proposition. The discussion of the American proposition was begun. This proposition is as follows:

"The private property of all citizens of signatory powers, with the exception of contraband of war, shall be exempt on the high seas or elsewhere from capture or seizure by the armed vessels or military forces of said powers. Nothing in this rule implies in any way the inviolability of vessels which will attempt to enter a port blockaded by the naval forces of said powers, nor of the cargo of said vessels."

W. H. De Baufort (Holland) then read a declaration stating that the Dutch government adhered to the American principle, "considering" it great progress towards the humanitarian ideas prevailing in the present time; consequently, Holland would support any proposal pending to secure this principle.

Brazil Not a Catspaw. Roy Barbosa (Brazil) then delivered a long speech in which he explained that the statement made by him on June 28, owing to the semi-secrecy of the conference, had been wrongly interpreted as an unconditional adhesion to the American proposition. He wished to make it clear that Brazil was not the catspaw of America, but that she supported this American principle for the reason that America never brought victory to any one. This had been proved in the case of France, which in 1870 had paid over six millions for having captured an insignificant number of boats.

Prof. De Martens then read a declaration presented in writing by the Argentine delegation saying they were favorable to the conservation of the right of capture.

England's Position Stated. Sir Ernest M. Satow then made a declaration on behalf of Great Britain. He said he realized the serious character of the arguments in favor of the inviolability of private property on the high seas, but the discussion showed the evident and logical tendency toward the abolition of the commercial blockade. Sir Ernest demonstrated to what an extent the limitation of blockades would complicate matters and create new causes of dispute as a result of which the discussions between belligerents would give rise to fresh irritation which might tend to prolong the war instead of shortening it. The inviolability of property and the limitation of blockades are inseparable questions, the English representative continued, and Great Britain for the moment does not find the movement toward the ideal aim, namely, the abolition of war, sufficiently accentuated to be able to associate herself with the American doctrine.

"What Great Britain thinks necessary to establish," Sir Ernest then declared, "is respect for the interests of neutrals; that is why she protests the abolition of contraband."

Baron Marschall von Bieberstein said Germany would be ready to collaborate in the protection of private property at sea, but on condition that the question how to make this protection efficacious be first elucidated. M. Tcharykoff declared the Russian delegation had profound respect for the ideas set forth by Mr. Choate, but they did not think the question was yet ripe for solution. Dr. F. Hagerap voiced the adherence of Norway to the American doctrine, and the Portuguese delegation subscribed to the statement made by the German delegates expressing the belief that it is first necessary to solve the questions of blockade and contraband.

A Substitute. Being very close-listed Mason had never allowed himself the costly habit of smoking. He always felt himself a loser when anyone treated to cigars. But on one occasion, when the party he was with entered a stationery and cigar store, he made up his mind to have his share of the treat. "Won't you smoke this time?" asked the leader. "No, thank you," replied Mason; "but if you don't mind, I believe I'll take a pencil."—Harper's Weekly.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS WRECK OF ENGINE

Locomotive "Sneaked" Out of St. Paul Roundhouse This Morning and Ran Into Turntable Pit.

Unnoticed by any member of the night force, which was still on duty, locomotive 125 "sneaked" out of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul roundhouse at an early hour this morning and ran into the turntable pit, where its tender was wrecked and the table badly damaged. The engine had been fired up to go out on the Davis Junction freight run and had up enough steam to move it at a rapid rate. When the workmen were scattered about the shops and further end of the engine house it stole out and the first intimation of the accident was the crash which could be heard for a block around. Machinists and engineers state that the throttle was not

The Northwestern derrick was borrowed and the Northwestern and St. Paul wrecking crews spent the greater part of the morning in picking the tender out of the pit.

BAXTER MINE WAS SOLD YESTERDAY

Local Owners are Pleased With Their Part in the Deal But Will Not Name the Purchasing Price.

On Wednesday negotiations were concluded for the transfer of the Baxter mine, located near Cuba City, to the syndicate of upper Michigan men represented here by Joseph Hurmes and F. O. Bell of Negaunee and P. E. Bronson of Ishpeming. W. F. Palmer, George S. Parker, S. B. Lewis, J. M. Bostwick, J. L. Bostwick and Robert M. Bostwick, Jr., of this city, who owned the property, will hold substantial blocks of stock in the new stock company but the controlling interest goes over to the new owners. The dimension of the purchase price cannot be ascertained at this time, but inasmuch as it is said to have been "satisfactory to all concerned," must have amounted to a snug fortune. The stock company proposes to build a new mill, erect homes for the employees, and develop the mine on a big scale. All the stock is subscribed and none will be offered on the market. The Janesville shareholders will have no active part in the management and will simply look on and take their dividends.

DECIDED FOR THE PARKER PEN CO.

Suit Arising Out of Judge Grimm's Reduction of Jury Verdict Concluded in Municipal Court.

In municipal court this morning judgment was given for the defendant in the case of the Hicks Co. of New York City vs. the Parker Pen Co. Judge Fifield holding that certain gold pens in question are the rightful property of the defendant, The Hicks Co. was plaintiff in a suit tried during the last term of the circuit court and recovered $213 by the jury verdict for the defendant. In this action the defendant set up the claim that it had the right to return certain defective products for credit on account.

On the motion for a new trial Judge Grimm cut down the jury verdict $100. As the result of this the plaintiff claimed to have been re-vested with the title to a quantity of defective pens worth about $48, which had, in the meantime, been taken away from the court. This contention was denied by Judge Fifield this morning. Atty. M. P. Richardson appeared for the Hicks Co. and Atty. William Dougherty for the Parker Pen company.

False Signal.

"You don't believe in romance, do you?" said the old boarder. "You bet your typewriter I don't," sighed the young man with the bandage around his head. "I had my share." "How was that?"

"Well, you see I was forbidden to call on my best girl and every night she would sit out on the balcony and at a certain hour strike a match. That would be the signal for me to stick my head through the vines and kiss her."

"Ah, very poetic." "Yes, but the other night I saw the match flare up, stuck my head through the vines and got the worst thrashing I ever received. You see, the old man happened to be out there lighting his pipe."

The Princess Elopes

By HAROLD MacGRATH,
Author of "The Man on the Box,"
"Hearts and Masks," Etc.

(COPYRIGHT, 1905, BOBBS-MERRILL CO.)

"Don't try the window," he warned, but with rather a pleasant smile. "He was only two or three years older than Max. If you do, you'll break your neck."

"I promise not to try," replied Max. "My neck will serve me many years yet."

"It will not if you have the habit of running away with persons above you in quality. Actions like that are not permissible in Europe." The colonel spoke rather grimly, for all his smile.

The door slammed, there was a grinding of the key in the lock, and Max was alone.

The library at Doppelkinn was all the same. The cases were low and ran around the room, and were filled with romance, history, biography and even poetry. The great circular reading table was littered with new books, periodicals and illustrated weeklies. Once Doppelkinn had been threatened with a literary turn of mind, but a bad vintage coming along at the same time had effected a permanent cure.

Max slid into a chair and took up a paper, turning the pages at random. What was the matter with the room? Certainly it was not close, nor damp, nor chill. What was it? He let the paper fall to the floor, and his eyes roved from one object to another. Where had he seen that Chinese mask before, and that great silver-faced clock? Somehow, mysteriously, and strange as it seemed, all this was vaguely familiar to him. Doubtless he had seen a picture of the room somewhere. He rose and wandered about.

In one corner of the bookshelves stood a pile of boy's books and some broken toys with the dust of ages upon them. He picked up a row of painted soldiers, and balanced them thoughtfully on his hand. Then he looked into one of the picture-books. It was a Santa Claus story; some of the pictures were torn and some stuck together, a reminder of sticky, candied hands. He gently replaced the book and toys, and stared absently into space. How long he stood that way he did not recollect, but he was finally aroused by the sound of slamming doors and new voices. He returned to his chair and waited for the denouement, which the marrow in his bones told him was about to approach.

It seemed incredible that he, of all persons, should be plucked out of the practical ways of men and thrust into the unreal fantasies of romance. A hubbub in a restaurant, a headlong dash into a carriage compartment, a long ride with a princess, and all within three short hours! It was like some weird dream. And how the deuce would it end?

He gazed at the toys again. And then the door opened and he was told to come out. The grand duke had arrived.

"This will be the final round-up," he laughed quietly, his thought whimsically traveling back to the great plains and the long rides under the starry night.

CHAPTER XI.

The Grand Duke of Barschelt was tall and angular and weather-beaten, and the whites of his eyes bespoke a constitution as sound and hard as his common sense. As Max entered he was standing at the side of Doppelkinn.

"There he is!" shouted the prince. "Do you know who he is?"

The duke took a rapid inventory. "Never set eyes upon him before."

The duke then addressed her highness. "Hildegard, who is this fellow? No names! I want the truth! I have, in the main, found you truthful."

"I know nothing of him at all," said the princess curtly.

Max wondered where the chill in the room came from.

"He says that his name is Scharfstein," continued the princess, "and he has proved himself to be a courteous gentleman."

Max found that the room wasn't so chill as it might have been.

"Yet you eloped with him, and were on the way to Dresden," suggested the duke pointedly.

The princess faced them all proudly. "I eloped with no man. That was simply a little provocation to worry you, my uncle, after the manner in which you have worried me. I was on my way to Dresden. It is true, but only to hide with my old governess. This gentleman jumped into my compartment as the train drew out of the station."

"But you knew him!" bawled the prince, waving his arms.

"Do you know him?" asked the duke coldly.

"I met him out riding. He addressed me, and I replied out of common politeness—with a stinging glance at Max, who stood with folded arms, watching her gravely."

The duke threw his hands above his head as if to call heaven to witness that he was a very much wronged man.

"Arnheim," he said, to the young colonel, "go at once for a priest."

"A priest!" echoed the prince.

"Yes, the girl shall marry you tonight," declared his serene highness.

"Not if I live to be a thousand!" Doppelkinn struck the table with his fist.

The girl smiled at Max.

"What?" cried the duke, all the coldness gone from his tones. "You refuse?" He was thunderstruck.

"Refuse? Of course I refuse!" And the prince thumped the table again.

"What do you think I am in my old age—an ass? If you have any dillies to break, use your own pastures. I'm a vintner. He banged the table yet again. "Why, I wouldn't marry the Princess Hildegard if she was the last woman on earth!"

"Thank you!" said the princess sweetly.

"You're welcome," said the prince.

"Silence!" bellowed the duke. "Doppelkinn, take care; this is an affront, not one to be lightly ignored. It is international news that you are to wed my niece."

"To-morrow it will be international news that I'm not!" The emphasis this time threatened to crack the table-leaf. "I'm not going to risk my liberty with a girl who has no more sense of dignity than she has."

"It is very kind of you," murmured the princess.

"She'd make a fine wife," went on the prince, ignoring the interruption.

"No, a thousand times no! Take her away—life's too short; take her away! Let her marry the fellow; he's young and may get over it."

The duke was furious. He looked around for something to strike, and nothing but the table being convenient, he smashed a leaf and sent a vase clattering to the floor. He was stronger than the prince, otherwise there wouldn't have been a table to throw.

"That's right; go on! Break all the furniture, if it will do you any good; but mark me, you'll foot the bill. The prince began to dance around. "I will not marry the girl. That's as final as I can make it. The sooner you calm down the better."

How the girl's eyes sparkled! She was free. The odious alliance would not take place.

"Who is that?"

Everybody turned and looked at Max. His arm was leveled in the direction of a fine portrait in oil which hung suspended over the fireplace. Max was very pale.

"What's that to you?" snarled the prince. He was what we Yankees call "hopping mad." The vase was worth a hundred crowns, and he never could find a leaf to replace the one just broken.

"I believe I have a right to know who that woman is up there," Max spoke quietly. As a matter of fact he was too weak to speak otherwise.

"A right to know? What do you mean?" demanded the prince fiercely. "It is my wife."

"With trembling fingers Max produced his locket."

"Will you look at this?" he asked in a voice that was a bit shaky.

The prince stepped forward and jerked the locket from Max's hand. But the moment he saw the contents his jaw-fell and he reeled on his heels unsteadily and staggered back toward the duke for support.

"What's the matter, prince?" asked the duke anxiously. After all Doppelkinn was an old crony, and maybe he had been harsh with him.

"Where did you get that?" asked the prince hoarsely.

"I have always worn it," answered Max. "The chain that went with it originally will no longer fit my neck."

"Arnheim! . . . Duke! . . . come and look at this!"—feebly.

"Good heaven!" cried the duke.

"It is the princess!" said Arnheim in awed tones.

"Where did you get it?" demanded the prince again.

"I have always worn it," answered Max. "The chain that went with it originally will no longer fit my neck."

"Arnheim! . . . Duke! . . . come and look at this!"—feebly.

"Good heaven!" cried the duke.

"It is the princess!" said Arnheim in awed tones.

The attendance and interest of last night's meeting at the rink went beyond the expectations of the most sanguine. The first service after a holiday is generally dead but the meeting last evening was a glorious exception. Messrs. Smith and Van Camp by solos and duet brought the entire

JURYMEN GROW UNEASY

Complain of Lack of Exercise and Strictness of Bailiffs—Other Witnesses Discredited Orchard.

Boise, Idaho, July 6.—A beginning of the end of the Haywood trial was reached Friday. Counsel for the defense announced that, with the exception of three or four witnesses, their case in direct is before the jury. Charles H. Moyer, the accused president of the Western Federation of Miners, will be called as witness on Monday next. He will be followed by William D. Haywood, the defendant. Judge Fremont Wood has asked counsel on both sides to submit their requests for instructions to the jury. He has notified counsel that he will consider these requests and will agree with counsel as to what his instructions shall be in order that the arguments on both sides may be limited to what the jury will be allowed to consider as evidence. In adjourning court Friday afternoon until next Monday morning at ten o'clock, Judge Wood said that he hoped the interval would be utilized by counsel in preparations that would prevent further delay and bring the case to as speedy a close as possible.

May Get Verdict in Two Weeks.

It is now expected that the rebuttal evidence in behalf of the state will commence on Wednesday or possibly on Tuesday, much depending on the extent of the cross-examination of Moyer and Haywood. Counsel for the defense and prosecution after the adjournment were willing to admit the possibility of a verdict or disagreement in two weeks.

Some uneasiness on the part of the jurymen, as a result of their long confinement, developed Friday afternoon. Just before the adjournment of court Juror S. P. Russell, turned to the bench and asked if the jury would be allowed to exercise during the two days' adjournment. He complained that some members of the jury were disinclined to take walks and that for that reason the other jurymen were unable to take exercise to which they were accustomed and without which there was danger of sickness.

Says Bailiffs Are Strict.

A. P. Burns complained that the bailiffs in charge of the jury were too strict and that a jurymen who exceeded some trivial rule was summarily called to order. Juror J. A. Robertson, the good humored Scotchman occupying the ninth chair, defended the bailiffs and said laughingly:

"Well, I don't know about being too strict. I know I never had a better time in my life."

The five witnesses on the stand Friday morning added support to those who have preceded them. They were called to testify concerning conditions existing in Colorado during the disturbances at Cripple Creek, and to show that there was no reason to call out the militia.

Express Companies Must Obey Law.

Lincoln, Neb., July 6.—Attorney General Thompson Friday evening, in the supreme court, enjoined the five express companies doing business in the state from seeking to evade the provisions of the law reducing express rates 25 per cent. The new law went into effect Friday. Thus far all of the companies have ignored it.

Deidrich fled along the river bank pursued by a policeman. The fugitive, refusing to halt, was fired upon by the officer. Deidrich shot himself twice in the head and leaped into the river. East St. Louis, Ill., July 6.—Following a family quarrel, James Layton, a machinist, 42 years old, Friday night shot his wife in the neck and then shot himself through the heart. Mrs. Layton will recover.

AFFECTION OF THE NERVES.

Stammering Not Always Due to Defects in Vocal Organs.

"Stammering is often more the result of habit than from any defect of the vocal organs," says Prof. E. L. Pavver. "It is generally, if not always, caused by a spasm of the larynx, resulting from nervous contraction of the organs, thus refusing to permit a proper flow of the air current producing tone. People rarely or never stammer when singing; for then the attention is divided between the words and music, the nervousness is momentarily forgotten and the passage of the air current through the larynx is continuous and unobstructed. Stammering very often is the result of imitation, sometimes intentional, sometimes unintentional and the affection" is "much more general" than might be supposed. In one comparatively small section of the city there are 35 stammerers, and every one of them is able to demonstrate to his own satisfaction not only that he does not stammer very badly, but that some other person he knows stammers a great deal worse than himself. Every stammerer is intensely sensitive about his infirmity, rarely forgives and never does forget any allusion to it which in his mind savors of ridicule.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

in the parade on the Fourth? It's the best and most perfect mixer in the world. It enables me to lay cement sidewalks and do all kinds of cement and concrete work in less time and at a lower price than any others.

This mixer is made by the Knickerbocker Co., Jackson, Mich.; and it is the very newest improved machine for this work and it does its work far better and more uniformly than the old hand way. It saves time, too, and thereby enables me to do all kinds of cement and concrete work at lower prices than others.

I guarantee all concrete work to be at least an 8 to 1 cement, and I guarantee all my work in every way.
